YOUNG SCHOLAR FORUM

For the Swiss Political Science Conference 2020, we organize two events for the Young Scholars Forum:

Event 1 “Why should I do a PhD in Political Science” focusing on MA-students who are interested in pursuing a PhD in Political Science, Monday, 10:30-12:00, HS5

Event 2 “How to get published? Ask the editors!” focusing on (advanced) PhD students who are interested in learning more about the publication process and strategies to publish, Monday, 13:30-15:00, 3.B01

The Young Scholar’s Forum of Swiss Political Science Association 2020 is a platform where we address topics and issues that are of particular relevance to (prospective) PhD students and postdoctoral researchers.

The previous Young Scholar’s Forum focused on making one’s research visible for non-specialized audiences outside academia. For the 2020 Young Scholar’s Forum, we intend to address questions that are relevant for scholars’ distribution of research outputs within academic journals. We will be focusing on strategies about publicizing research findings in high quality political science journals, and address frequent pitfalls and challenges scholars face when engaging in peer-reviewed publication processes.

Event 1: Why should I do a PhD in Political Science?

The first event aims at presenting the PhD in political science to master students who wish to pursue a PhD and to early PhD students who would like to benefit from the experiences of more advanced PhD students. In particular, the objective of this roundtable is to discuss the different modalities (funding, SNF grants etc.) of doing a PhD and their implications on the daily work. Moreover, we will be addressing questions related to the application processes, how to choose your supervisor, what to pay attention to if you wish to pursue an academic career, if and when to plan an exchange abroad, and many other questions. More broadly, this event will be a unique opportunity to share experiences and to respond to practical questions of doing a PhD in political science.

Organization/moderation: Anna-Lena Nadler, University of Geneva

Event 2: How to get published? Ask the editors!

The second event targets advanced PhD students and PostDocs. It seeks to discuss publication strategies and questions related to publishing processes. To this aim, we invited four editors of prestigious political science journals. The event discusses practical questions pertinent to young scholars in the context of academic publishing. For instance, we aim at addressing questions such as which journal is best suited for publication or what do I need to consider before handing in a manuscript. The event will be a unique opportunity for a direct exchange between editors and young scholars.

Organization/moderation: Nadja Mosimann, University of Zurich & University of Geneva

INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL SOCIOLOGY

Panel 1: Keynote + Roundtable Theorizing in/of IPS

Monday, 11:00-13:00, 3.B47

What kind of theoretical ambitions are entailed by studies in/of IPS? What does it therefore entail to make a theoretical contribution? And how might one communicate and formulate this in the context of a research project? These questions matter pragmatically for IPS scholars striving to persuade scholars inside and/or outside the field of the interest and value of their work. Not surprisingly therefore they have occupied a central place in recent discussions as scholars have come with different bids for answers. Huysmans and Nogueira have advocated “fracturing” as a strategy, Bigo has suggested we look for transversal lines, Weber that we Queer things, and a manifest of sort has recently been published calling for a recrafting of IR through a relationality attentive to tracing the logic of multiple worldings. These are just some examples from a broad panoply of IPS calls to rethink the meaning of theorization. In this panel we discuss the implications of these kinds of reformulations of the theoretical endeavor for how IPS scholars conceive of, argue about and present their theoretical contributions.

Panel 5: Keynote – Technology and Materiality

Tuesday, 12:30-13:30 (brownbag session), 3.B47

In recent years, IPS scholarship has increasingly converged around the related themes of materiality and technology, incorporating New Materialist philosophy as much as Science and Technology Studies. This panel attempts to explore how diverse artefacts such as architectures and infrastructures, but also databases and interfaces, reconfigure the international as a space for political regulation and action.
